

- Mountain snowpack on May 2nd was 129% of average in the South Platte Basin and 123% of average in the upper Colorado River Basin.

NRCS SNOTEL snow water equivalent

Mountain Snowpack Timeseries Graph through May 2nd, 2014 (each line is a year of mountain snowpack)

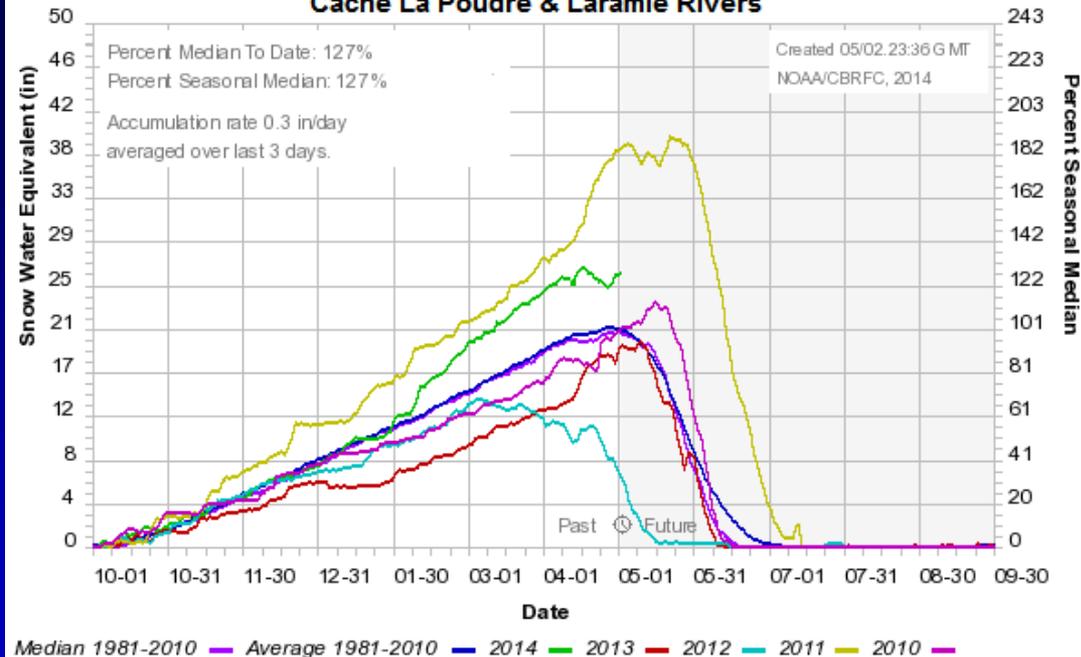

The May 2nd, 2014 snowpack in the north central Colorado mountains was roughly 131% of the median to date (average).

* SNOTEL data for this graph provided by the NRCS.

The green line on the time series graph shows the NRCS SNOTEL SWE (snow water equivalent in the snowpack) from October 2013 through the beginning of May 2014. The blue/violet lines show the 1981-2010 average/median.

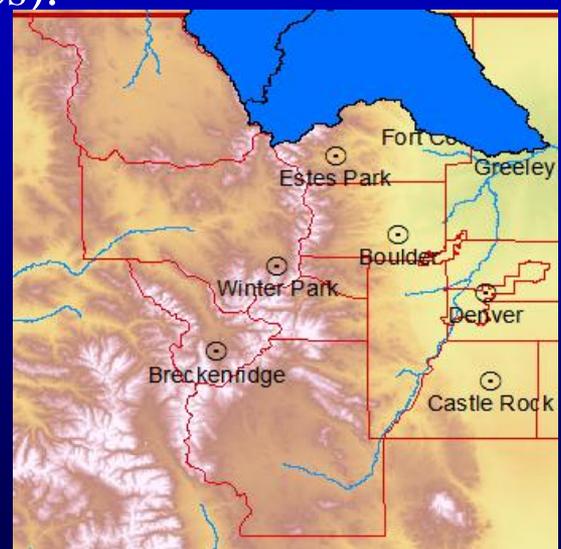

Cache La Poudre & Laramie Rivers

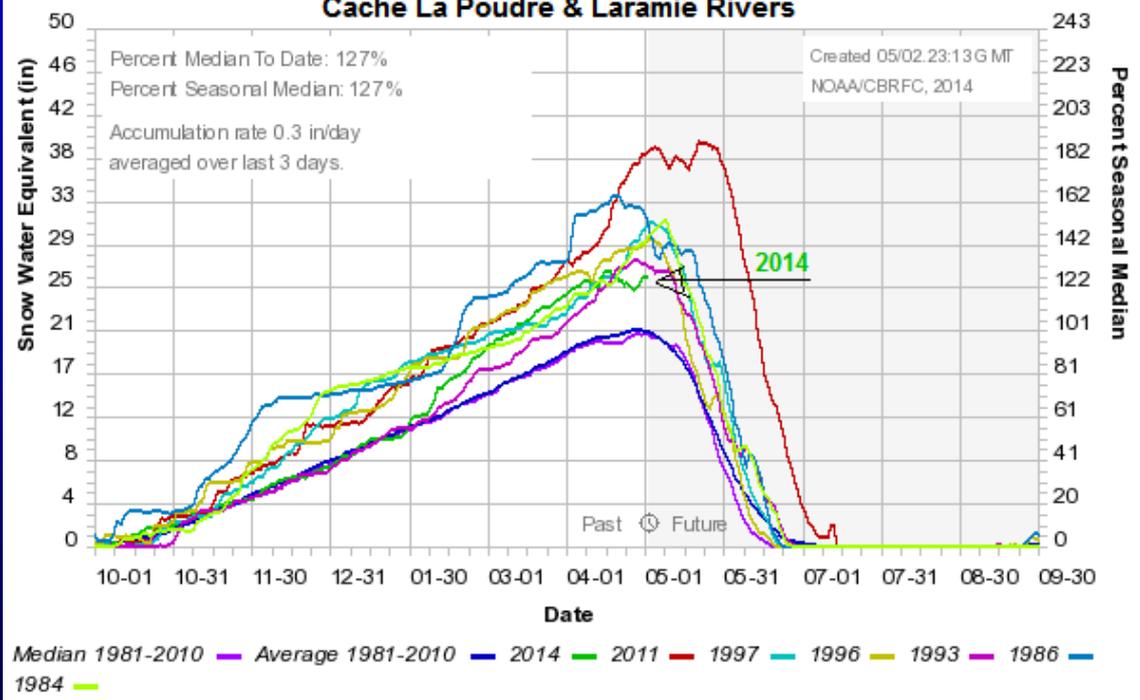

Mountain snowpack has been holding fairly steady in northern Larimer County.

The past 5 years are displayed on the 1st graph (next 5 slides).

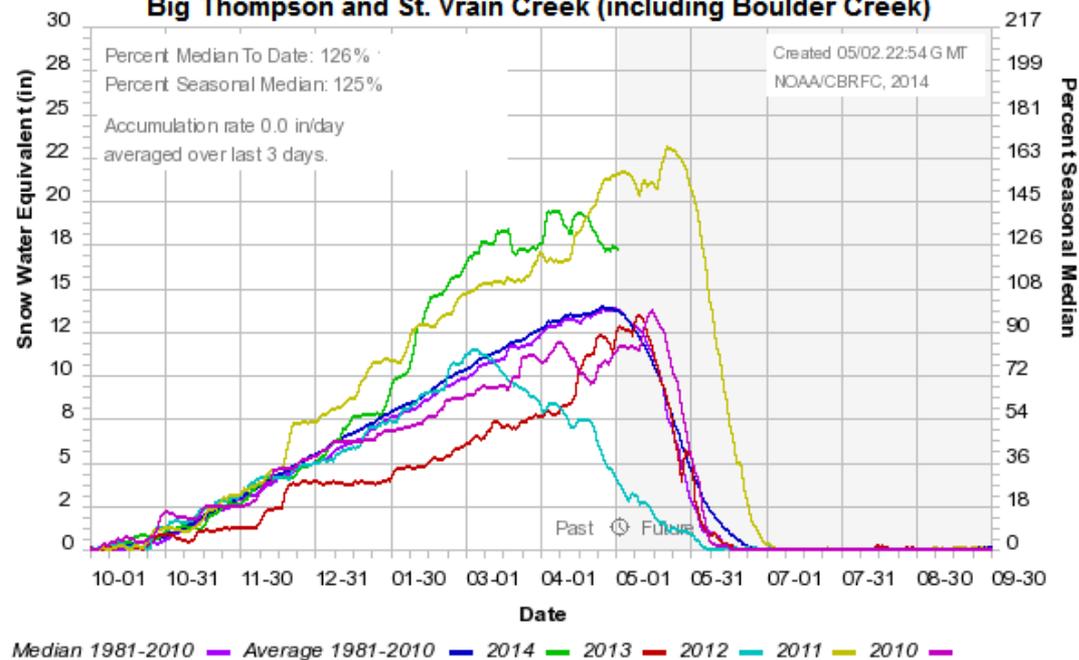

Highest snowpack years are displayed on the 2nd graph (next 5 slides).

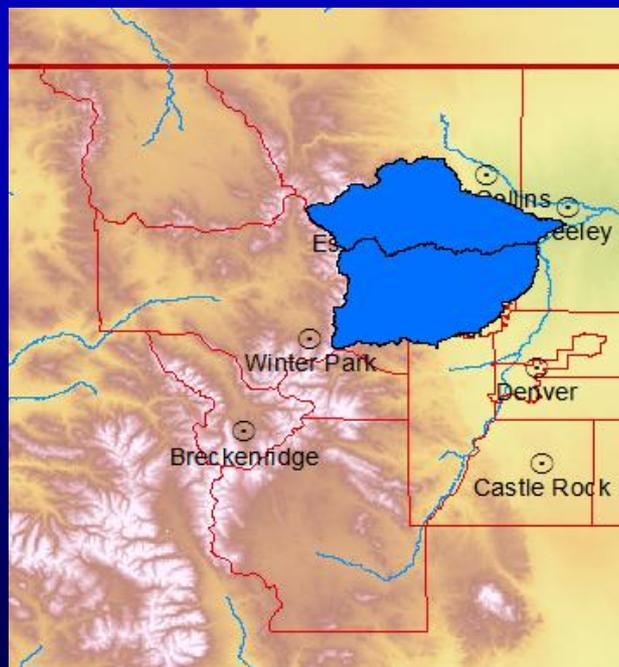

Cache La Poudre & Laramie Rivers

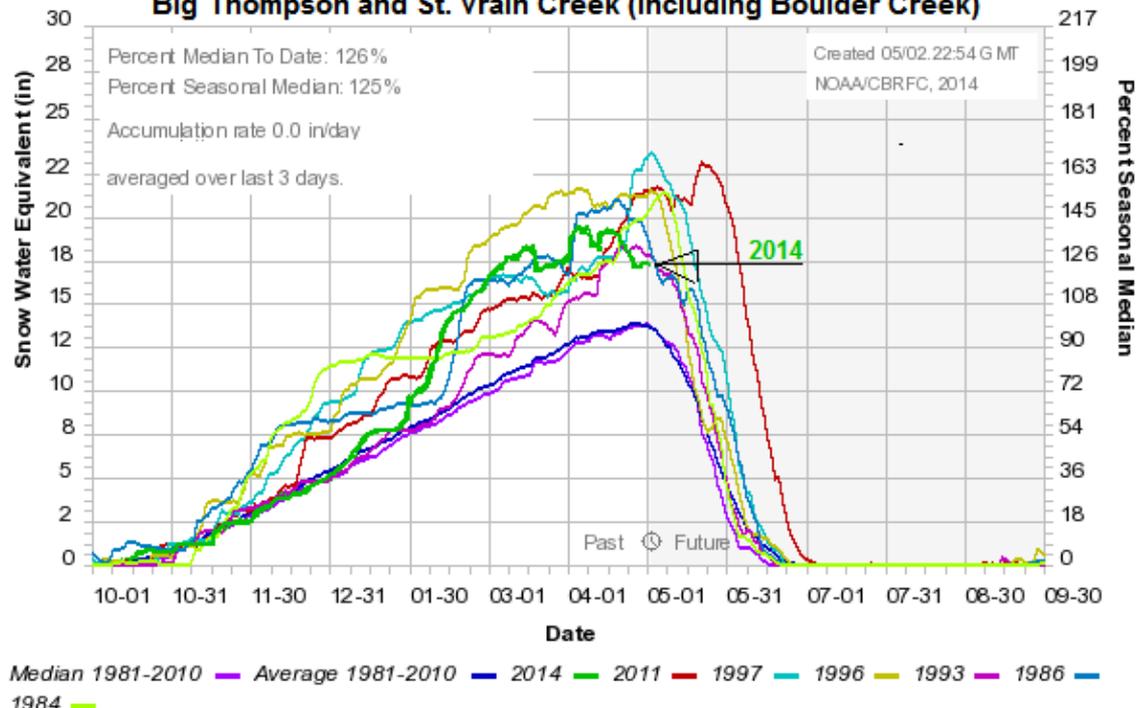

Big Thompson and St. Vrain Creek (including Boulder Creek)

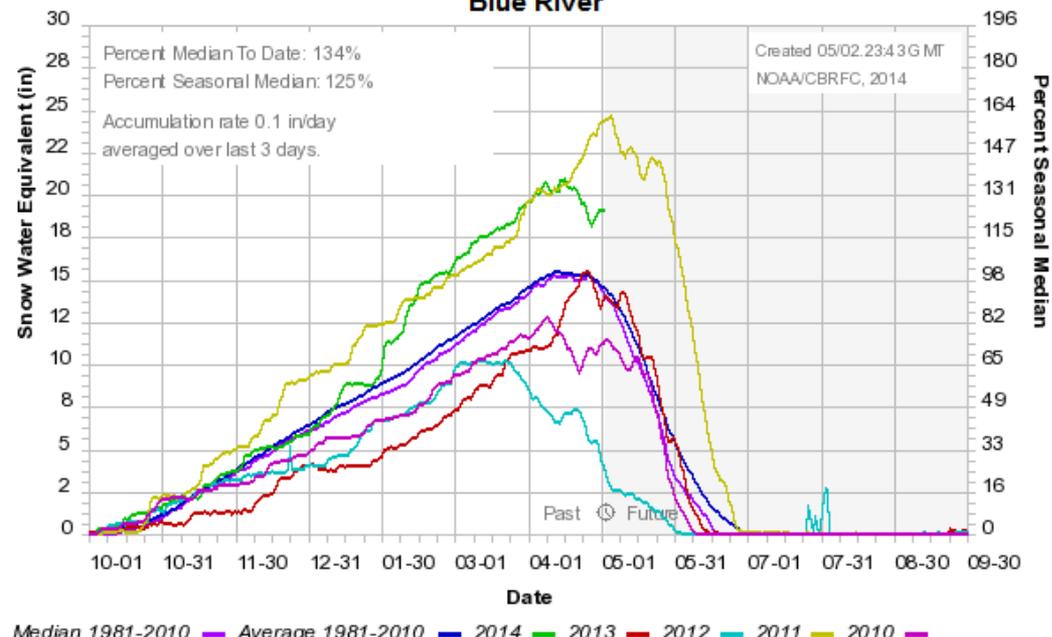

Mountain snowpack has been on the decrease a bit farther south. The 2014 snowpack is near the May 2nd 1986 & 1993 snowpack in Boulder & southern Larimer County.

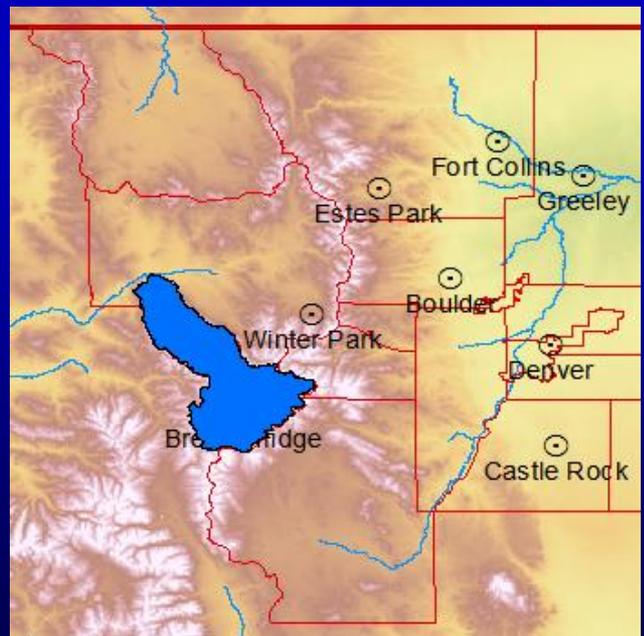

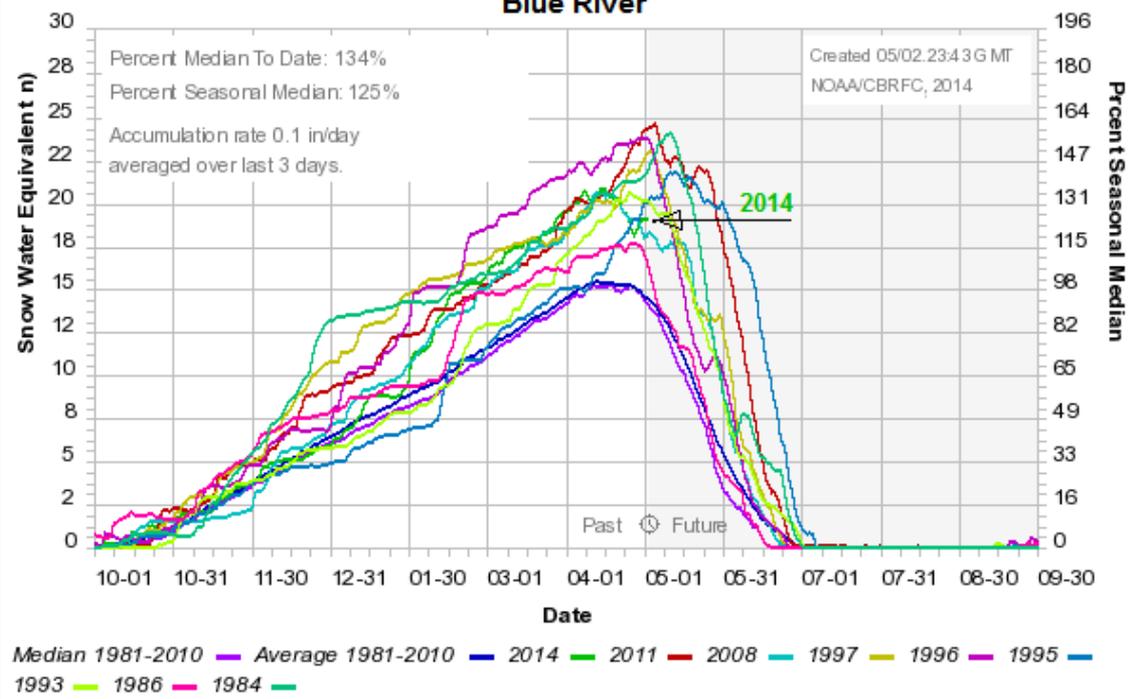

Big Thompson and St. Vrain Creek (including Boulder Creek)

Colorado Basin River Forecast Center Blue River

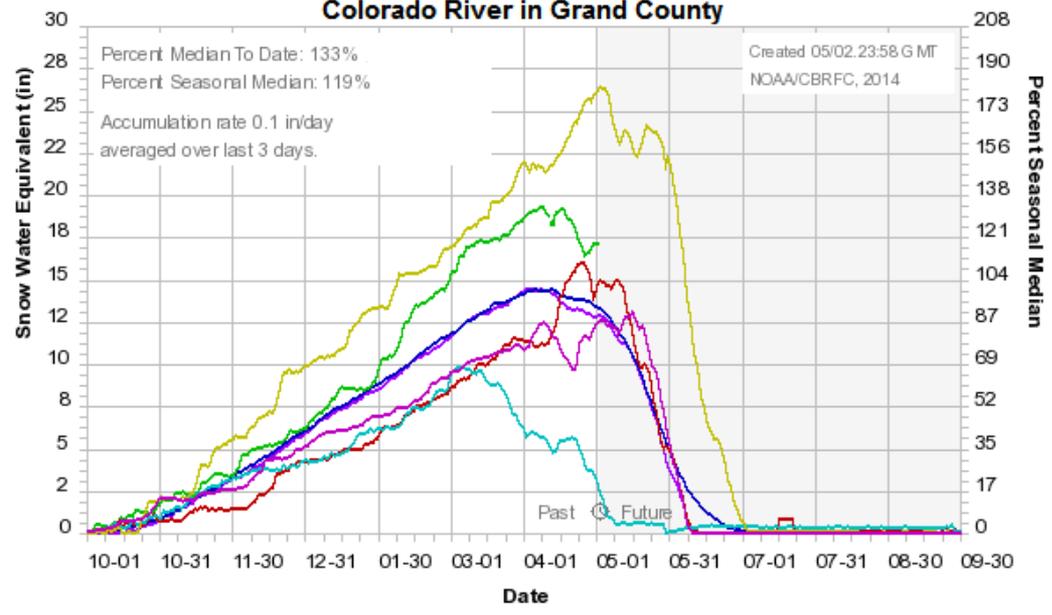

Colorado Basin River Forecast Center Blue River

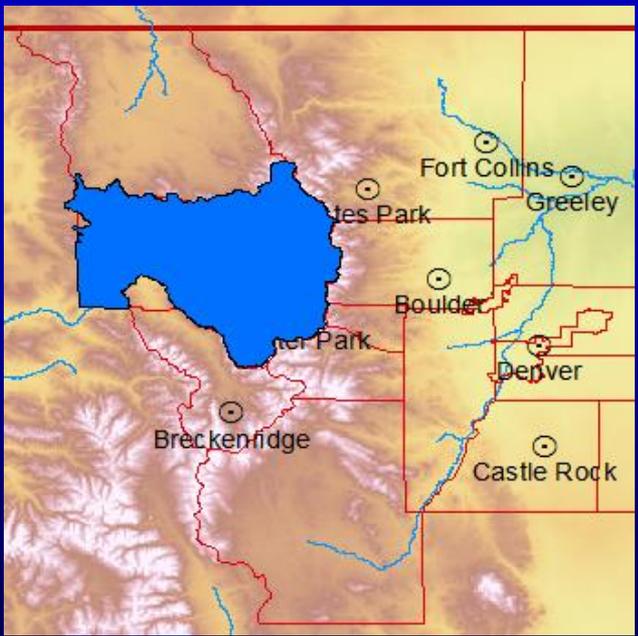

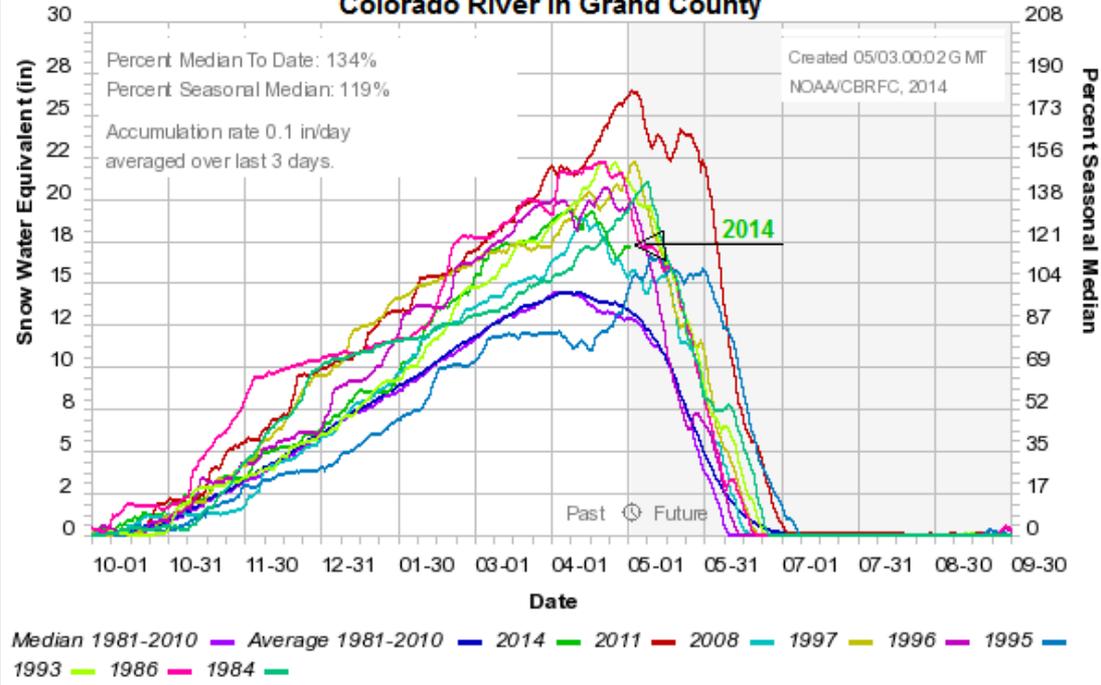

Colorado Basin River Forecast Center

Colorado River in Grand County

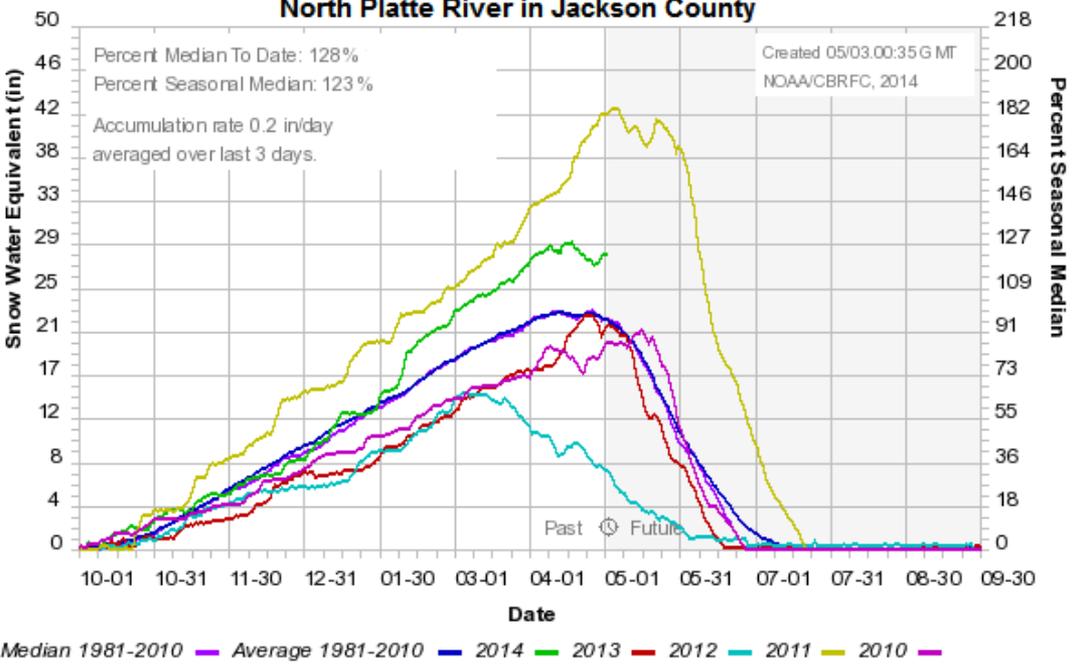

Colorado Basin River Forecast Center

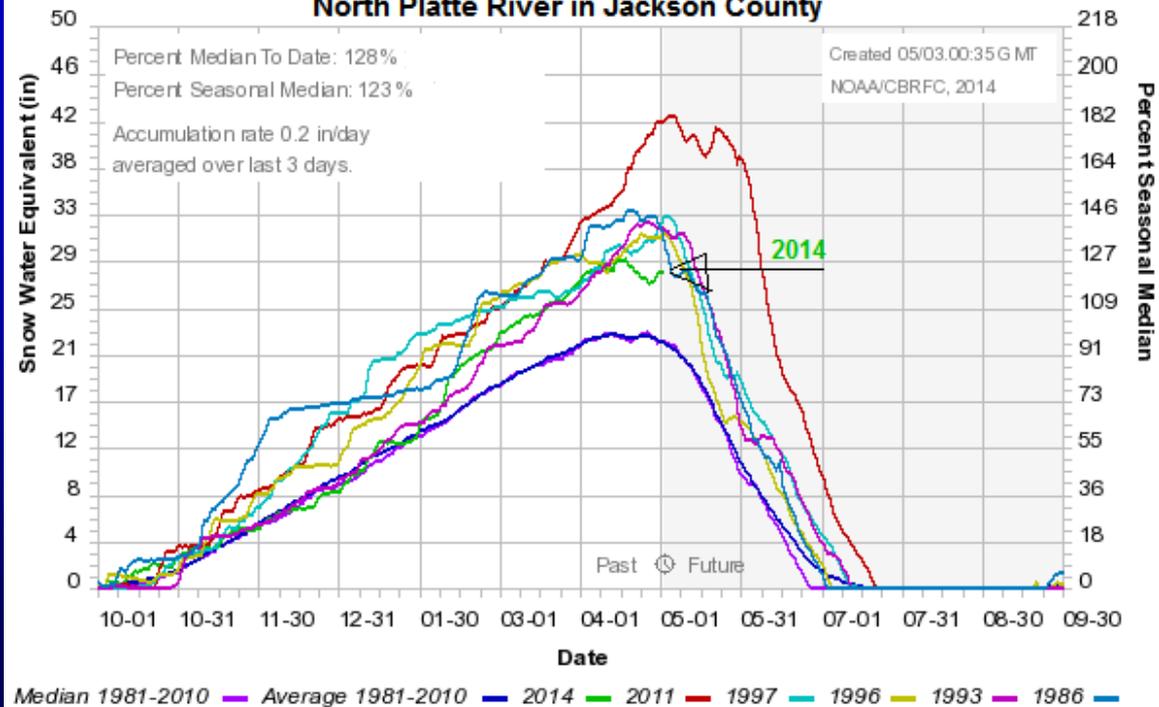

Colorado River in Grand County

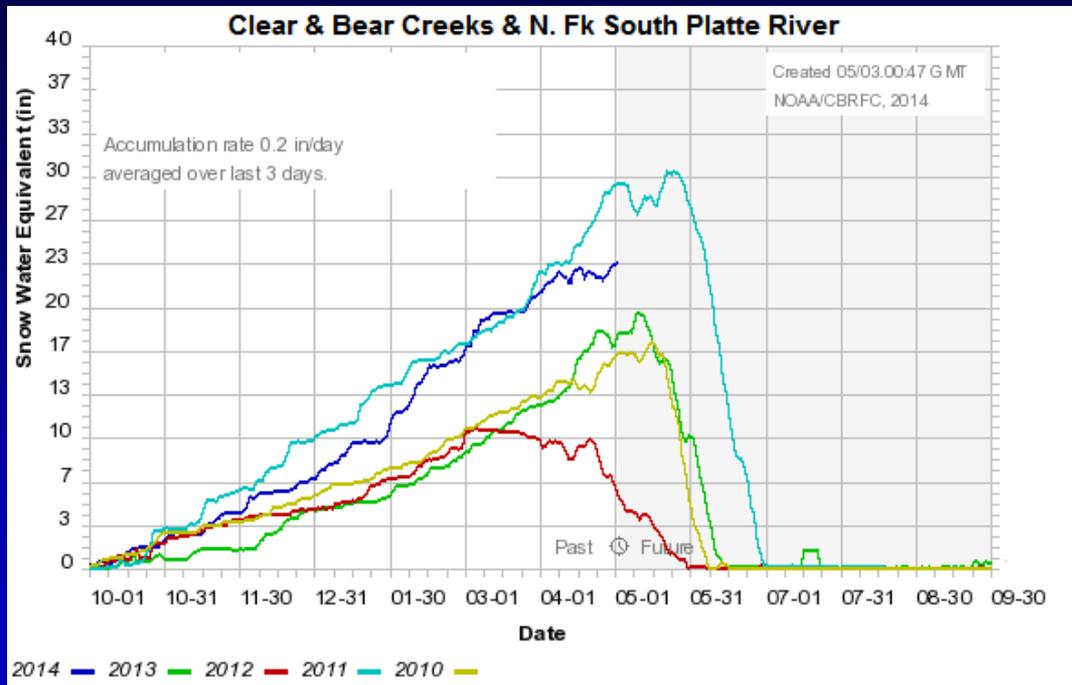

North Platte River in Jackson County

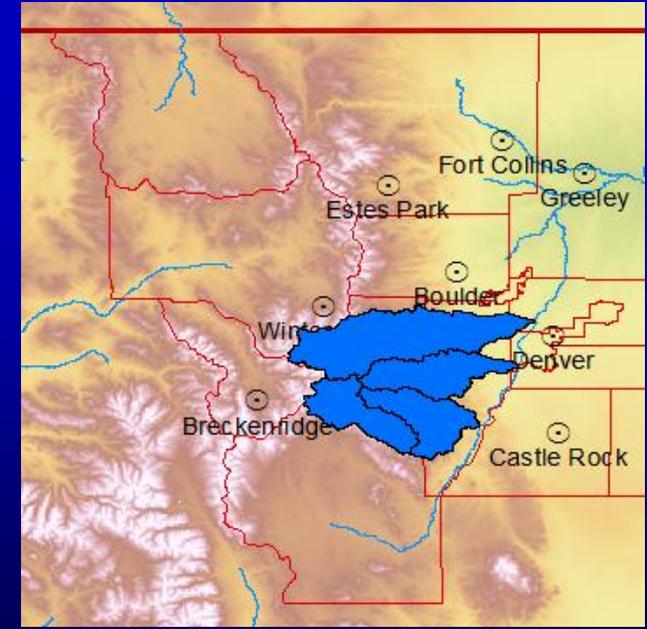

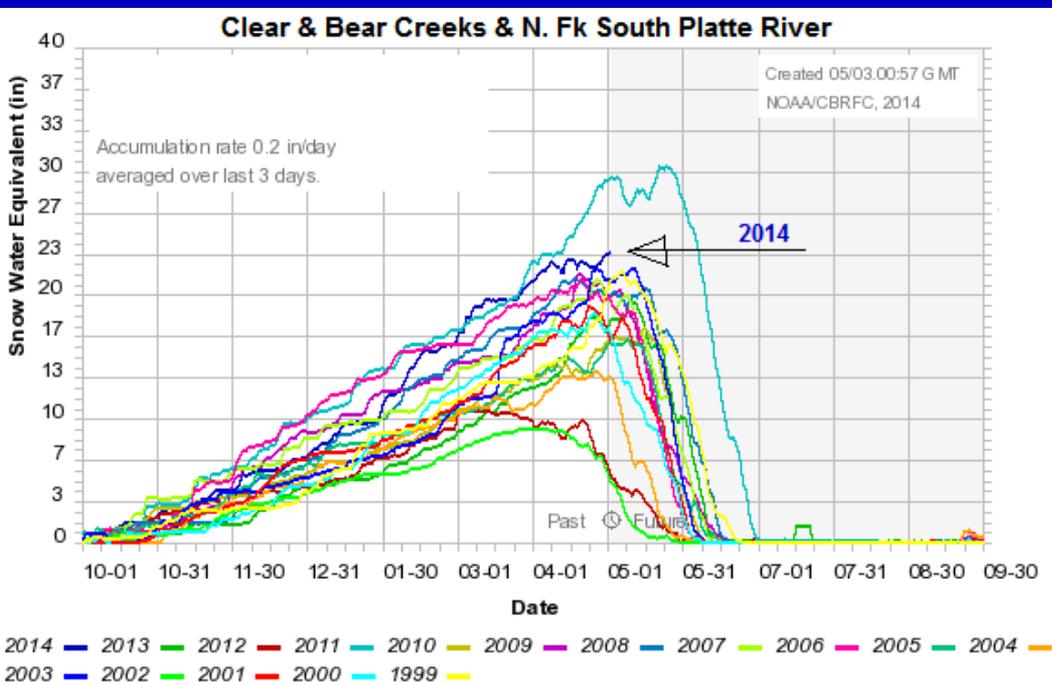

North Platte River in Jackson County

Past 5 years

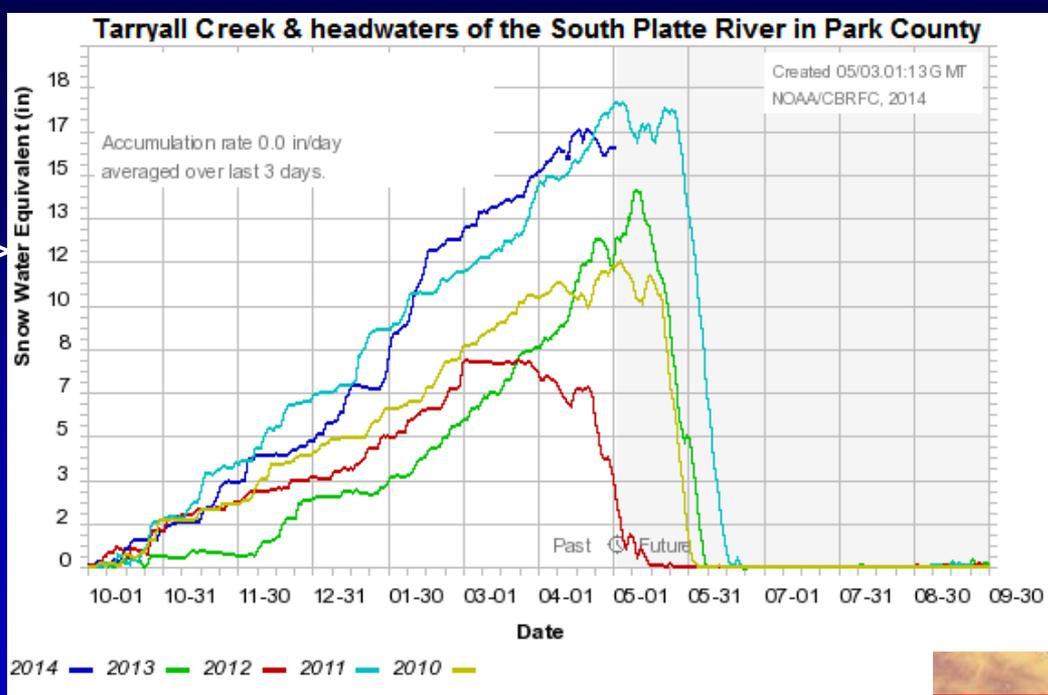

Average/median data was not available for these time series graphs.

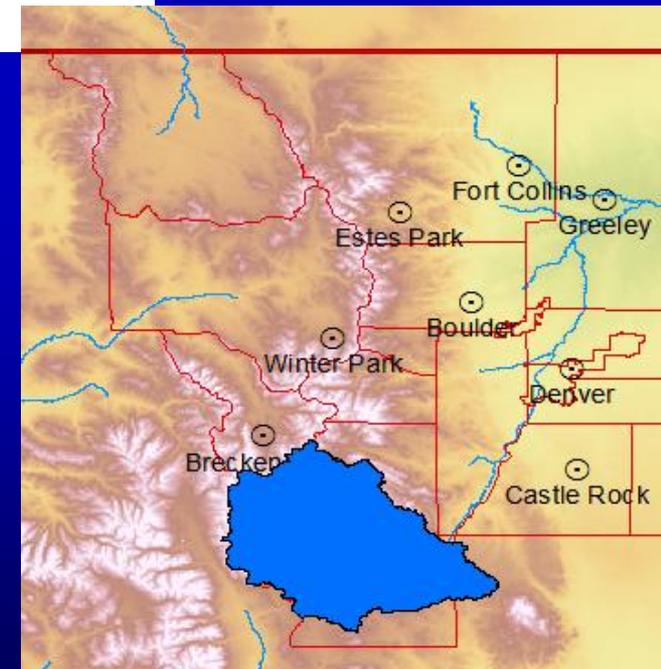

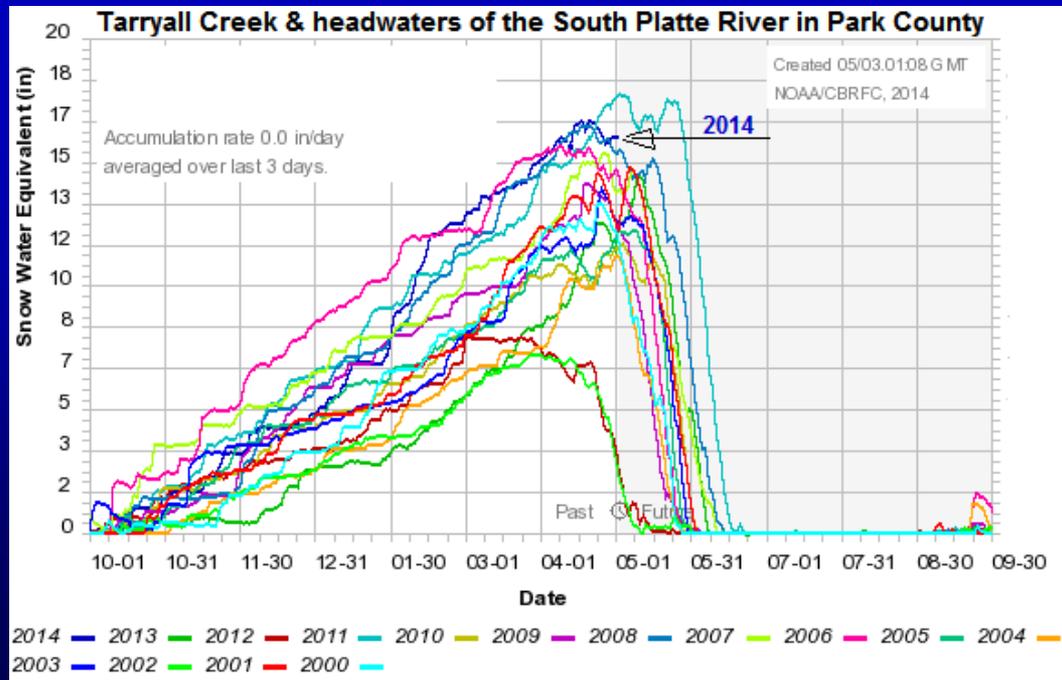

← Past 16 years

Past 5 years =>

The 2014 mountain snowpack near the Continental Divide in Park County remains just below the 2011 snowpack.

← Past 15 years